Reasons to Attend School Events

Events are an unavoidable part of school life. They can strengthen the interpersonal connections between teenagers and hone their social skills, which is why maintaining high rates of attendance is important. The following report illustrates the main trends in the students' reasons for participating in school activities.

Unsurprisingly, the prevalent reason for attending events was the possibility of having fun - 88 percent of students said enjoying the experience was necessary for them. The opinion on whether acquiring knowledge through school performances is possible fluctuates: half of the students consider it to be a major reason for attendance, while more than 20 percent believe it is unnecessary. Compared to others, attending a popular annual event is rarely the main reason for going, and more than thirty percent of ~~the~~ ^{teenagers} consider it to not be important. More than a half of all students look up to their family and friends while deciding whether to attend or not.

The recommended course of action would be incorporating activities most people enjoy in order to increase the participants' satisfaction with the event, which will, in turn, positively affect attendance. Another possible way to make school performances more popular is ^{to} increase ~~the~~ the involvement of the students' families.

To sum up, enjoyment is the main reason for attendance, followed by supporting family members and friends. The percentage of students who go to ~~these~~ ^{school} events can be increased by providing more opportunities to satisfy their desires.
