Not so many existing reasons are motivating enough for students to attend the school events more often. The reason that nearly all questioned students called major is the enjoyability, which is caused by the stress and pressure many students feel during lessons, affecting them in such a way that it's crucial for them to relieve tension and have an enjoyable free time. Another trend is that of ignoring the annual events: the lowest percent of students consider it to be a major reason for attending.

The survey also proved that it is equally important for students to attend if they themselves are involved or if their friends or faculty members are. The percentage of people for whom it is important to get an educational experience and meet up with faculty or friends is roughly equal.

In order to raise awareness and popularity of annual school events it is suggested to give talks and dedicate lessons to the school's traditions, but also to try and modernize them, making them more appealing for the younger generation. It is also recommended to increase the involvement of students in the school events by giving benefits for the shown activity.

To conclude, it is possible to increase attendance and make the events more
