Perm - a city for anyone to enjoy

There is no doubt that Perm is a great place for any tourist to visit. It has modernised greatly in the past seventy years, and its living conditions are now praised as some of the best in Russia.

If you visit Perm, you do not need to worry about getting around the city, as electric buses are available throughout the city nowadays, replacing obsolete vehicles with internal combustion engines. Food delivery has also been popularised lately, although you will be pleased to find out traditional restaurants are still around and serve a wide variety of food. I especially recommend sushi restaurants, as Russia has a long history of Asian cuisine. Most people tend to work and study from home, but a sizeable minority still uses offices and schools. Some places historically used for work have been converted to museums - the ~~Clark~~ Office Clark museum is especially popular with tourists.

Although some older people prefer their dated VR headsets, the youth usually spends their free time outside, often in public parks such as the Gorky park. Many young people I know also like to visit museums and theatres - they see them as a return to the physical world and a break from the virtual one. ~~You~~ ~~might also be interested~~ If physical entertainment is not for you, you may always visit the Museum of Virtual Reality, which will show you the software advancement during the 21st century leading up to the integrated systems we see nowadays.

Perm is a city that caters to the interests of any visitor, old or young. Travelling around Perm, you are almost guaranteed to find something that suits yours.
