As part of school's property we have a museum on the ground floor. Although the place is rather small, it contains some 200 highly-valued historical items. Unfortunately, analysis of the ~~Nowadays~~ current situation shows that museum resources are not being used by students to the fullest.

Nowadays, the museum resources are not being utilized used effectively. One of the factors causing the issue is the timetable. At the moment museum limitation on visits is up to 1pm, whereas most students have classes till 2pm. Another reason for rapidly declining audience is the fact that students find it less and less engaging to simply look at the glass-sealed artefacts.

In order to attract more visitors museum management can install interactive screens for students to use. Furthermore, letting kids touch and feel some of the items will greatly enhance their experience. Making the displayed information less formal will also increase the level of engagement. In addition, to allow more students to attend, the museum should be opened until at least 6pm.

To sum up, the museum seems boring and dull for students at the current state. To combat that and increase the output of satisfied customers museum management team should appeal to kids more. This could be achieved with the use of modern technology and friendlier approach to presenting the information.
